MoneyWise Pulse | 2025 | November edition
Crisil Foundation

MoneyWise Pulse

2025 | November edition

Leadership Lens:

The School of Everyday Finance: Financial Literacy from the Ground Up

By Maya Vengurlekar
Chief Operating Officer, Crisil Foundation

In many of India's villages, financial learning doesn't begin with formal classrooms or online modules. It begins around kitchen tables, during weekly savings meetings, and in moments when families make choices about money. Recognising this reality, MoneyWise was developed to build practical, relevant financial literacy rather than abstract theory.

The programme has now been conducted over the past decade has been significant. Richerkela such as the Pradhan Mantri Jan Dhan Yojana (PMJDY) and the growth of digital payments have helped bring millions into the formal financial system. But inclusion on paper is only the first step. The more difficult challenge is helping people use financial services in ways that truly improve their lives.

To measure the impact of MoneyWise, we conducted a study titled The Crisil Foundation MoneyWise Centres for Financial Literacy (FLCs) in collaboration under the RBI's Deputies Education and Awareness Fund (DEAF). The study assessed the effectiveness of these centres in improving financial knowledge, attitudes, and behaviours among rural households. The findings were encouraging. Around 2.37 crore individuals. The FLCs work to build awareness, trust and positive financial behaviour among rural households.

The FLC approach differs from traditional financial education formats. Training is delivered in simple, local language through stories, songs, games, radio programmes and street theatre to enable topics such as budgeting, saving, banking, insurance, digital payments and fraud awareness. Trained local volunteers, known as Vittiya Saathis, also play a key role, actively participating in each session and encouraging through role play. The focus is on translating financial ideas into relatable, memorable messages.

Impact has been visible in both knowledge and behaviour. Trainees are often drawn from the most financially excluded households, including women, daily wage workers and those with limited formal banking and credit. The lessons are short, repetitive and practical, helping participants dream and apply them in their daily financial decisions.

The experience from the CFL network suggests that financial literacy efforts work best when they move beyond one-time interventions and instead create ongoing spaces for learning and support. Regular meetings, peer discussions and trusted local facilitators have been more effective than one-off training sessions in helping people retain and act on what they learn.

Ultimately, financial literacy is not only about access to information but about enabling people to make informed, confident choices in their own circumstances. As India's financial system continues to expand, a 'school of everyday finance' can help ensure that inclusion translates into real empowerment, not just increased participation on paper.

Impact Chronicles:

Stories from the Community

Brewing Independence: The Story of a Tea Seller's Digital Leap.

For Anamika Bhowmika Das, who migrated from Assam in search of work, a small tea stall in Kolkata's Sealdah area is more than a business.

Her partner has always been the primary breadwinner, working as a bank account, also dependent on a friend's QR code for payments, often missing out on sales when he was away. Inspired by a visit to the Kalyanpur Centre for Financial Literacy (CFL), she decided to open her own account. She learned how to use UPI, set up her own QR code, helping her open an account and obtain a personal QR code. Now, she can receive payments directly, track her earnings and even save small amounts digitally. Her goal is to build a financial history to secure her daughter's future through the Sukanya Samriddhi Yojana.

Anamika's story is a powerful example of how financial literacy can provide the small but crucial empowerment that transforms geography and destiny.

From Stone to Strength: Vyptha's Journey of Enterprise.

In the quiet town of Agrahara in Nagapatna's Zumbara district, Vyptha Gowda's life was shaped by the rhythm of her father's chisel. For three decades, that chisel is done. He envisioned starting his own stone-cutting business, but a lack of capital and access to formal credit kept his dream out of reach. Vyptha, who had watched her father's struggle, found her own path. She joined a Centre for Financial Literacy (CFL) in Kalyanpur, where she learned about government schemes and the importance of financial literacy. With the help of Vittiya Saathis, she learned about schemes such as PMJJBY, PMSBY, and PMJDY. It was the MUDRA loan that changed everything.

Vyptha's application was initially rejected, but she refused to give up. With the help of the CFL team, she appealed and successfully secured a loan of ₹5 lakh. Today, Vyptha's business employs five people from her village and has become a symbol of hope and opportunity in her community. Her story is a testament to the power of financial literacy when it is combined with courage and determination.

In Ukhrul, change rides on the digital law.

In Manipur's hill district of Ukhrul, home to the Tangkhul community, Thangmeiren Kamei's life was changed by a ₹1 lakh loan from the Centre for Financial Literacy (CFL) at Phungcham. The loan, sanctioned under Tele Welfare Association (CDTWA) to connect Rotterdam, a financial literacy centre in Phungcham, Ukhrul district.

Despite the promise of connectivity, the CFL faced challenges. Many people, digital practices, while basic banking services were available. Trust in digital platforms was low, and many residents were unfamiliar with online transactions. To overcome these barriers, the CFL partnerships and financial awareness can steer even remote sectors toward a connected, safer digital future.

Restoring Access, Renewing Trust: Jaspreet Kaur's Journey Back to Banking.

For over two years, Amarjeet Kaur, a daily wage labourer under Bhatinda's Mandi Kalan block, was locked out of her own bank account. Her mobile number was linked to a dormant SIM card, and the resident angan in bank transactions from schemes such as PMJDY.

Her journey to restoration began at the Centre for Financial Literacy (CFL) Phulkian Rajpura, both as an inter-state bank, and the CFL team helped her navigate the process. Through the BSFM office, the committee accompanied her to the local BC Agent, Ramesh Kumar, who helped her update her KYC and re-link her account. Amarjeet's account was reactivated, and she received a new debit card and ATM pin.

Today, Amarjeet uses her financial autonomy, reinforcing the vital link between access, awareness, and empowerment.

Breaking barriers begin with dialogue and trust.

The transgender in this community, recognised as India's traditional third gender, have historically faced deep social exclusion, with many forced to beg or engage in sex work to survive. Access to basic services like banking and SHG membership, much continue to face discrimination, leaving them vulnerable to exploitation and financial insecurity.

Recognising the urgent need to address these challenges, the Centre for CFL) sought to engage with a local transgender group. Initial outreach efforts were met with suspicion and hesitation. Through a series of dialogues with patient dialogue and respect, the CFL team gradually earned the community's confidence, opening doors for a structured on financial literacy. The CFL's approach was rooted in empathy and understanding, recognising that for this community, financial literacy is not just about money management—it is about dignity, safety, and transformation. It ushered in the first step, building trust, and creating a safe space to discuss sensitive topics like discrimination and violence.

In the Limelight:

Recognising our Team Members

From Volunteer to Community Changemaker.

Asha hails from the remote village of Gagohari, Uttar Pradesh. Her engagement with financial literacy began as a volunteer with the Centre for Financial Literacy (CFL) Kalyanpur, a part of the Crisil Foundation's MoneyWise programme.

Within three months, she helped 150 villagers open bank accounts and access government benefits. Her dedication and clear communication soon led her to become one of the top trainers for the Sukanya Samriddhi Yojana. Recognising her enthusiasm, the CFL team invited her to join as a Vittiya Saathi. Asha's role now involves conducting financial literacy camps, training Vittiya Mitras, and mentoring new volunteers. Her journey has been supported by Capacity Building Officer in Manoharpur, she leads the CFL Manoharpur centre, where she inspired dozens to follow in her footsteps.

Asha's journey shows how sustained effort at the grassroots can create meaningful and lasting change.

Growing with the Community.

Mushkan Ahmed began his journey in November 2021 as Assistant Centre Manager at the Centre for Financial Literacy, Dhubri, Assam. His role involved conducting financial literacy camps, assisting villagers with PMJDY and PMSBY, and helping them access government benefits. Known for his calm demeanour and clear communication, he quickly earned the trust of the community.

From setting up CFL offices and training staff to ensuring smooth operations, Mushkan's responsibilities grew. He was instrumental in establishing new centres, overseeing their functioning, and maintaining high standards. His dedication was recognised with certificates and positive government benefits. Known for strong interpersonal skills and a deep commitment to financial inclusion, Mushkan has become a mentor to others, showing how dedication creates opportunities efficiently to communities.

Mushkan's journey demonstrates how professional growth and meaningful community impact can go hand in hand, driven by the quiet yet transformative impact of committed leadership.

Lighting the Nights: Sohan Lal Meena's Ratri Chaupal Initiative.

Sohan Lal Meena, Centre Manager of CFL Bari Basti in Rajasthan's Dholpur district, has been a driving force behind financial literacy in Rajasthan's Dholpur district. Since joining the programme in MoneyWise in 2021 and quickly rose through the ranks, now overseeing multiple centres and leading a team dedicated to empowering rural communities.

His signature initiative, the Ratri Chaupal, brings financial literacy directly to villagers after sunset. These evening gatherings, often lasting two hours, combine education with entertainment, using songs, skits, and interactive discussions to engage audiences. The approach has proven highly effective, with participants retaining information and adopting a more disciplined approach to finances. Sohan Lal's dedication and his innovative, community-driven approach have made him a respected figure in the region, inspiring others to follow in his footsteps.

Bridging gaps, building trust, and driving change in remote Mizoram.

Amar Bindu Chakma, field executive of Lawngtlai CFL, has been instrumental in spreading financial literacy across Mizoram's remotest villages along the Indo-Bangladesh border. Since joining in 2021, he has conducted numerous camps and has set a goal to ensure that every household in his area of operation has a bank account.

His signature initiative, the Ram Chaupal, brings financial literacy directly to villagers after sunset. These evening gatherings, often lasting two hours, combine education with entertainment, using songs, skits, and interactive discussions to engage audiences. The approach has proven highly effective, with participants retaining information and adopting a more disciplined approach to finances.

Sohan Lal's dedication and his innovative, community-driven approach have made him a respected figure in the region, inspiring others to follow in his footsteps.

Driving Financial Literacy in Difficult Terrains.

Prerna Sharma, Centre Manager of Khanook CFL, has been instrumental in spreading financial literacy in Khanook and its many other neighboring roads disrupted by heavy rainfall and landslides. Despite these challenges, she has successfully reached out to over 1,200 villagers, ensuring that no one is left behind.

Despite these challenges, she has successfully reached out to over 1,200 villagers, ensuring that no one is left behind.

Prerna's dedication underscores the crucial role of local leaders in advancing financial awareness and resilience, even in the most challenging terrains.

Demystifying Financial Concepts:

The Sunk Cost Fallacy: When Past Investments Cloud Financial Judgement

Understanding the Bias

The sunk cost fallacy occurs when individuals or organisations continue a course of action merely because they've already invested time, money, or effort, even when evidence shows it's no longer viable.

In finance, this behaviour leads to irrational decisions that protect past choices rather than future outcomes.

Why It Happens

Once resources are committed, emotional attachment and the fear of loss take over. People tend to overvalue their past investments, conflating commitment with prudence. This often results in "throwing good money after bad."

Where We See It in Finance

- Holding losing investments: Investors keep inflating capital into unprofitable ventures hoping for a turnaround.
- Depreciating assets: Investors hold onto falling stocks or properties instead of cutting losses.
- Lifestyle overspending: Families maintain costly subscriptions or vehicles that no longer fit their financial goals.
- Project escalation: Businesses pour more capital into unsuitable fields because of prior investment in fees or years.

Each of these decisions reflects emotional reasoning rather than objective financial evaluation.

Why It's a Financial Risk

Strong financial literacy encourages forward-looking judgement. To avoid the sunk cost trap:

- Assess current value: Base decisions on present data, not past spending.
- Evaluate alternatives: Reallocate funds to ventures with better risk-return profiles.
- Be decisive: Recognise losses early and exit gracefully.

The MoneyWise Takeaway

Effective financial management is about optimisation, not justification. Recognising sunk costs as non-recoverable helps individuals and organisations make clear, data-driven choices.

Letting go of unproductive investments preserves both financial health and future growth potential. A hallmark of truly wise money management.

Brain Teasers:

A 5-point refresher on financial inclusion

Q1. What is the Sunk Cost Fallacy?

- a) The tendency to overestimate the value of a decision based on its potential future benefits.
- b) The belief that a person will always act in their own best interest, even if it harms others.
- c) The tendency to underestimate the risks associated with a decision.
- d) The tendency to continue a behaviour or project because of the resources already invested, even if it is no longer rational to do so.

Q2. Which of the following is an example of the Sunk Cost Fallacy?

- a) Deciding not to go to a concert because the tickets are too expensive.
- b) Choosing to invest in stocks because you want to make money in the future.
- c) Intend to go to a gym, despite an entire story, because you've already paid for a year's membership and don't want to waste the money.
- d) Deciding to sell stock because its fundamental significantly.

Q3. What is a Money Mule?

- a) A person who receives and transfers money on behalf of someone else.
- b) A person who helps others to launder money.
- c) Person who invests money in a legitimate business.
- d) A person who donates money to charity.

Q4. Which of the following is a common online phishing tactic?

- a) A legitimate email from a bank asking you to verify your account information.
- b) A phone call from a tech support company offering to fix your computer.
- c) A social media post from a friend asking you to share personal information.
- d) A suspicious email with a link to a fake website that looks like a legitimate one.

Q5. What should you do if you suspect that you have been a victim of digital fraud?

- a) Delete your bank statements and other financial records.
- b) Contact all the contacts in your address book and ask for help.
- c) Change your passwords and secure your online accounts.
- d) All of the above.

Word Hunt: Grind and find, words to mind!

Ready to test your skills? Dive in, circle, and unravel the hidden words in our word search game!

S	B	I	L	L	P	A	Y	M	E	N	T	S	Y	S
B	A	N	K	I	N	G	A	G	E	N	T	S	E	A
A	N	K	Y	C	A	S	H	L	E	S	S	A	R	V
N	K	I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N
K	Y	C	A	S	H	L	E	S	S	A	R	V	N	K
I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N	K	Y
N	K	I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N
K	Y	C	A	S	H	L	E	S	S	A	R	V	N	K
I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N	K	Y
N	K	I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N
K	Y	C	A	S	H	L	E	S	S	A	R	V	N	K
I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N	K	Y
N	K	I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N
K	Y	C	A	S	H	L	E	S	S	A	R	V	N	K
I	N	C	O	M	E	I	N	S	U	R	A	N	K	Y

BSBL APY BKP PMSBY PMJJBY PMJDY BANK SAVE CASH BILLS FRAUD LOAN ACCRUAL UPI KYC INSURANCE DIY PENSION RD FD SIP NPS CREDIT SCORE PHISHING MONEY MULE MEDIA LTD. NSAA, NSBL LOSS BIPS, KYC, NSLM, NPCI, NCFE, MITC, OTP, PMJDY, PMSBY, PPMLS

Design and Publication Support: Corporate Communications Team, Crisil Foundation
Editorial Team: Nandini Sharma, Ankit Kumar, Rahul Verma, Priya Singh
Contributors: Maya Vengurlekar, Asha Devi, Mushkan Ahmed, Sohan Lal Meena, Amar Bindu Chakma, Prerna Sharma
Photography: Crisil Foundation Archives, Field Reporting Teams